Holocaust Survivor Inspires Daughter To Become Trauma Specialist.

When tragic events occur such as terrorist attacks, collapsing bridges, war, earthquakes, and violent crimes, the pain from the memories of these events leaves an indelible etching in an individual's brain. This causes a psychological traumatic reaction that if not treated can not only cause suffering for the traumatized person, but also for their children and maybe even grandchildren.

Dr. Orli Peter, a psychologist based in Beverly Hills is a trauma specialist, whose father was a holocaust survivor. Her passion for psychology was born out of her desire to help her father deal with being one of only 700 to survive the Holocaust in the Lodz ghetto in Poland, where 250,000 people were killed.

Her compassion for her father led her to specialize in trauma. Her clients over the years have included victims and their families: Iranian's who were tortured or abused, South Americans that fled war torn countries or revolutions,

Joey Bishop Last Member of 'Rat Pack,' Dies

By Mark Schoifet

(Bloomberg) — Joey Bishop, the glum-faced comedian who was the last surviving member of Frank Sinatra's celebrated Rat Pack of the 1960s, has died. He was 89.

Bishop died at his home in Newport Beach, California, last night, according to the Associated Press, citing his friend and publicist, Warren Cowan.

The Rat Pack, which also included Dean Martin, Sammy Davis Jr. and actor Peter Lawford, became synonymous with Las Vegas after the group caused a sensation with its show at the Sands casino in January 1960. Sinatra called Bishop "The Hub of the Big Wheel," citing him as the anchor of the Rat Pack's anarchic nightclub act.

An accomplished stand-up comic, Bishop was content to play the straight man to his more-swinging cohorts.

"He wasn't filler," said Sandy Hackett, the son of comedian Buddy Hackett, who played Bishop in a touring revue called "The Rat Pack Is Back" this year. "Joey wrote a lot of what the Rat Pack did. He wrote a lot of the great lines and then gave them to Joey Bishop and the infamous Rat Pack at the Sands.

1959 after Sinatra assembled a cast including Bishop for the heist film "Ocean's Eleven." At night after filming, in what was billed as "The Summit," Frank, Dean, Sammy, Joey and Peter would take the stage of the Sands Copa Room for an evening of song, dance, drinking, bawdy jokes and ethnic gags.

Guests included dignitaries, mobsters and Lawford's brother-in-law, future U.S. President John F. Kennedy. Bishop served as master of ceremonies at Kennedy's inaugural gala in 1961.
